For decades, Jeff Klaiber has been the architect of clever routings, challenging contours, and terrifying hazards, learning from the first name in golf torture—the incomparable Pete Dye. Klaiber recently put down his pen, bulldozer, and shovel to provide you with an insider’s view of course design principles, including creative drainage, haphazard hazards, visual intimidation, and the exact line between success and failure. He’ll entertain you while educating you on how to navigate Dye’s architectural wonders, major tournament-hosting courses, and top golf destinations worldwide with greater confidence and satisfaction. Our destinations focus on the Irish and Scottish influences on Dye, his many works in the United States and the Dominican Republic, and outrageous courses from remote outposts created by his most successful protégés.

Generally tailored to groups no larger than 50, assemble your favorite foursome, fellow members, co-workers, YPO retreat group, college buddies, wedding party, or anyone else, and set off on a golf trip like no other.
